CENTRE OF EXCELLENCE

MEMBERS' ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

All Centre of Excellence (CoE) members:

- Are required to adhere to the Centre of Excellence Charter, the Volunteer Code of Conduct and where applicable the Constitution of CPA Australia. The Charter will be provided to successful applicants before commencing tenure.
- Shall understand, and operate on the basis that, the CoE is an advisory group and is not a consensus or decision-making group and so is not a part of the organisation's formal governance structure.
- Shall have their names displayed on the CPA Australia website and in the CPA Australia Annual report, in recognition of the status that CoEs hold within the CPA Australia members engagement structures, especially as CoEs comprise senior members with specialist skills and expertise in focus topic areas.
- Shall participate in CPA Australia's volunteer performance arrangements.

CoE members will ensure that they:

- Communicate effectively: Members will share their thoughts and views freely and openly with other members of the CoE and CPA Australia staff facilitating the CoE. They should feel free to do so without the risk of being criticised for their views; but at the same recognise that the purpose of the CoE is to engage in robust, professional discussion of policy matters and through leadership topics relevant to CPA Australia, its member, the profession, and the business environment.
- Recognise the role of CPA Australia staff: CPA Australia staff facilitating the CoEs assist the effective functioning of the CoEs and their meetings. They coordinate meetings, agendas, work plans, and the work and activities undertaken by the CoE. While not appointed members of the CoE, they participate in the discussion and activities of the CoE, and their views should be considered equally alongside those of other CoE members. To assist staff in performing their duties, it is important that all CoE members communicate effectively with staff, acknowledging communications from them and indicate when they do not have comments to make on specific issues or topics.
- Prepare for meetings: CPA Australia staff commit to ensuring that meeting papers are provided to CoE members at least one week in advance (for face-to-face meetings) and two days in advance for teleconferences – which are shorter meetings. CoE members must have prepared for meetings by reviewing the papers presented in advance of the meeting. Staff will not be reiterating the contents of papers at meetings, but rather will be seeking input, comments, and feedback on them.
- Participate effectively: CoEs have work plans that typically outline key outputs and deliverables. To achieve these outcomes, CoE members are expected to participate in all CoE meetings. Where they are unable to attend – either in person, or by video/teleconference – they shall inform the CPA Australia staff member facilitating the CoE.

All members are encouraged to provide input, comments and feedback on matters raised at CoE meetings, and in other communications. Members will not always have strong expertise and experience across all topics, but are encouraged to provide lay views, as appropriate. However, where members do not have contributions to make, they are asked to communicate this to CPA staff facilitating the CoE.

Additionally, CoE members are encouraged to proactively raise matters for consideration as part of the CoE work plans, and to raise other important policy matters that come to their attention – for discussion and consideration by the CoE; or if a CoE meeting is not imminent, by CPA Australia Policy and Advocacy Team staff.

Participation extends beyond just meetings, as there will be times when the CoE's guidance and advice is requested on matters that arise between meetings/outside of the meeting cycle. This might require CoE members to respond to e-mail communications from CPA staff requesting input, comments, and feedback.

- Are alert to opportunities: CoE members should be alert to opportunities where they can promote and advocate for CPA Australia's policy positions and thought leadership work. This could be through CoE members own professional and social networks, their workplaces, or through other engagements in which they are involved. Such promotion and advocacy can be verbal, written, or through social media, but members will need to be clear when they are presenting the policy positions of CPA Australia and when they are providing their own personal opinions and perspectives. CoE members should also be alert to, and advise the CPA staff facilitating the CoE, of opportunities for CPA Australia to be represented at certain events. Staff members will need to follow internal protocols to determine whether and how, CPA Australia should be represented, so CoE members should not give affirmative responses to requests without consultation with, and conformation from, staff. There may be times when CoE members are asked to represent CPA Australia (see next point).
- Are given the opportunity to represent CPA Australia: On occasions, CoE members may be offered the opportunity to represent CPA Australia at certain events – for example, discussion groups, local or regional workshops, or events of a similar nature – typically within their own local area. Such representation needs to be coordinated with CPA Australia staff to ensure that internal and organisational protocols are met. Staff may, at times, seek out opportunities, especially for CoE Chairs. At times when CoE members are representing CPA Australia, they will be supported, in terms of presentation materials, by CPA Australia Policy and Advocacy Team staff. As experts in their fields, CoE members are free to express their own views when representing CPA Australia, as long as it is made clear to the audience when this is done. CPA Australia recognises that some CoE members may have restrictions placed upon their ability to formally represent CPA Australia, for example, due to employer commitments.

The time commitment for CoE members is around 50 to 70 hours over a year. Depending on the CoE and the agreed meeting schedule; this would typically comprise:

- 25 to 30 hours of meetings per year;
- 20 to 30 hours of other "off cycle" communication and contributions; and
- 5 to 10 hours of representative activities.

I have read this document and understand the expectations, role and responsibilities of me as a member of a Centre of Excellence (CoE).
